HAPPY BIRTHDAY!

Written and Illustrated by Jean-Young Kim
Brring! Brring! Sleepy Henry woke up Monday morning at 8 o’clock sharp to the sound of his annoying alarm clock. Yaawn! Today was going to be a good day.
Henry glanced at his calendar and noticed a big red circle.

Tomorrow was Henry’s 10th birthday!
Should I have a party with my closest friends? Should I eat cake and ice cream? Henry wondered as he got ready for school. He began to worry about how he would celebrate his special day.
“Good morning, Henry!” Maria greeted at the bus stop. “Isn’t it your birthday soon?” “It’s tomorrow,” Henry replied. “I’m going to have a party with my close friends and eat cake and ice cream!”
“That’s lame.” Maria said. “In Mexico, we celebrate birthdays with colorful piñatas filled with lots and lots of candy!”

Wow! Henry thought. That’s what I want to do!
“Good morning, Henry!” Ming greeted at school. “Isn’t it your birthday soon?”

“It’s tomorrow,” Henry replied. “I’m going to have a piñata filled with lots and lots of candy!”
“That’s weird,” Ming giggled. “In China, we eat looong noodles on our birthdays. Long noodles will give you a long life!”

Wow! Henry thought. That’s what I want to do!
“Hi, Henry!” Aaron greeted in the classroom. “Isn’t it your birthday soon?”

“It’s tomorrow,” Henry replied. “I’m going to eat long noodles!”
“That’s boring,” Aaron laughed. “In Jamaica, we throw flour at the birthday boy and have lots of fun!”

Wow! Henry thought. That’s what I want to do!
“Hi, Henry!” Tomas greeted in the lunchroom. “Isn’t it your birthday soon?”

“It’s tomorrow,” Henry replied. “I’m going to have my family and friends throw flour at me!”
“That’s bizarre,” Tomas scoffed. “In Lithuania, we lift the birthday child up in a chair so that he or she will grow to be strong!”

Wow! Henry thought. That’s what I want to do!
“Hi, Henry!” Igor greeted on the playground.
“Isn’t it your birthday soon?”
“It’s tomorrow,” Henry replied.
“I’m going to have my family and friends lift me in a chair!”
“That’s silly,” Igor teased. “In Russia, we celebrate by eating delicious birthday pies!”

Wow! Henry thought. That’s what I want to do... I think.
Birthday pie or birthday noodles?
Birthday noodles or birthday flour?
Birthday piñata or birthday chair?
It seemed that no one could agree on one thing!
Sleepy Henry went to bed at 9 o’clock sharp to the sound of his busy thoughts. Yaawn! Today was not a good day... he still hadn’t decided on what to do for his birthday! Would he even be able to celebrate at all?
HAPPY BIRTHDAY!
Henry was shocked at the delicious pies from Russia, extra long noodles from China, lots and lots of flour from Jamaica, a giant piñata from Mexico, and a chair from Lithuania.

This was the recipe for a perfect birthday!
But most importantly, Henry’s amazing friends each brought their own celebration to make Henry’s 10th birthday the best birthday ever.
Happy Birthday!, written and illustrated by Jean-Young Kim, was created as part of the B’nai B’rith International Diverse Minds Youth Writing Challenge in the Washington D.C. metro area.

The Diverse Minds Youth Writing Challenge is an education and awareness initiative created by B’nai B’rith International as part of its series of programs developed to combat bigotry through the promotion of tolerance and equality. The contest aims to present positive views about diversity to a broad range of youth in order to achieve tolerance within our communities.

Executed through public and private high schools within the Washington D.C. metro area, the contest asks high school students to write and illustrate a children’s book that tells a story of diversity and tolerance. Participants are required to think about how these principles can improve our world, and then create innovative ways to teach these ideas to children through the creation of a book.

Book submissions were reviewed by a local judging panel comprised of business leaders, educators, non-profit community leaders and local officials. Scholarship prizes in the amounts of $5,000, $2,000 and $1,000 are awarded to the first, second and third place winners, and the first-place winning book is professionally published and donated to elementary schools, libraries and literacy organizations.

For more information about the program and next year’s contest, please visit www.bnaibrith.org/diverseminds.
Jean-Young Kim, a junior in the Science, Math, and Computer Science Program at Poolesville High School, was selected as the first place winner of the 2015 Diverse Minds Youth Writing Challenge for the Washington, D.C Metro Area.

Happy Birthday! is a story very close to the author’s heart. As a child, Jean-Young felt anxious about being different from her friends so, like the story’s protagonist, Henry, she tried to blend in with those around her. Eventually she learned to appreciate the beauty of her own culture and those of her friends. She hopes that this book will help children to embrace their own unique identities, rather than be embarrassed by them.
B’nai B’rith International would like to thank the following judging panel members for donating their time and talents to reviewing the finalists’ submissions and selecting the winners for the 2015 Diverse Minds Youth Writing Challenge.
